END OF AGGRESSIVE POLICIES PREDICTED

Professor Hodges Says Prosperity Depends on Stability in World's Commerce

Replying to commentators who have pointed to a united Europe as a "danger sign" to the United States, Charles Hodges, professor of history in the Graduate School of New York University, declared that the Locarno pacts actually guarantee American prosperity for another generation, characterizing the European agreements in his address School of Politics at Radcliffe College today as a European insurance policy underwriting the prosperity of the United States.

To the several hundred members of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, who annually sponsor this miniature Williamstown Institute of Politics, as it is frequently called, Professor Hodges said that Locarno concerns America almost as much as it does Europe.

"The pacts of Locarno constitute the close of the era of the Great War. They demobilize the hates and suspicions of the war itself, the peace of Versailles, and the unhappy post-war days, mistakenly called the reconstruction period," he said.

The Secretary paid a tribute to the men who had been trained by the lighter-than-air craft, and said that this would mean a loss to the navy if the staton was abandoned and the personnel scattered.

Realignment of Defenses WASHINGTON, Jan. 14 (AP)—Realignment of the Nation's naval air defenses is contemplated in the Administration's havy program now taking shape in Congress. The reorganization would be accompanied by economies, including a reduction of navy enlisted personnel from 86. 000 to 82,000 and withdrawal of a ontinuation of the development of number of warships from active duty.

Viscount Goto makes a distinction between the Russian nation and Government, saying that the nation is greater than any government, and it is necessary to base the "fundamental principles of foreign policy" on interrelationship among nations, not governments. The Viscount says his views toward the Moscow regime are very similar to those of Herbert Hoover, with whom he discussed the subject in 1919. In general, he said, he was willing to leave the decision to Congress.

The Secretary paid a tribute to the lated by William M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, rather than to Government intervention.

Against the view represented by Mr. Sapiro and Judge R. W. Bingham, chairman of the National Council of the Conference, many midwest delegates at the present gathering are known to support government intervention in the farm crisis and particularly the fixation of the price of the exportable crop surplus. Recent dissatisfaction in Iowa over the corn situation has tended to throw the whole matter of agricultural dissatisfaction into politics. The present gathering is believed to have national signifishowing in what way the powerful farm co-operatives are likely to throw their weight.

Mr. Sapiro followed the lead of Judge Bingham in offering complete adherence to the Coolidge policy of supporting co-operative organizations. He reviewed the whole field of farm bills now proposed or pending in Congress, rejecting the Shipstead, McNary and Dickenson bills as all proposing the fixing of crop prices and the buying up of crop surpluses when they occur and "dumping them on foreign markets in order that domestic prices may be stabilized." such bills, but urged that in the present session the National Co-operative Council' should unanimously support the Jardine measure.

The Jardine proposal, Mr. Sapiro explained, would help the Government help the farmer to help him-self. This bill was drawn up with the assistance of co-operative leaders and would set up a bureau of farm economics in the Department of Agriculture to attempt to do as much for farm marketing and distribu-tion as the department has already done toward increasing farm produc tion. Mr. Sapiro said:

"The farmer's choice lies between co-operative marketing and federal intervention to fix prices. I believe the farmer can solve his own problems. Every short-cut toward a solution takes away, I believe, more of ndence from the farmer's manhood than it gains by economic advantage.

more than equality. We, the farmers, are at fault, not the legal situation. The farmer is weighed down by inertia. If the officials of this co-operaive organization really have faith in the things they have been telling to the growers, they are going to urge co-operative marketing, and not fed-eral price fixing."

WILD FLOWER PRINTS ON VIEW TO GREATER BOSTON STUDENTS

Reproductions of Mary Vaux Walcott's Paintings Exhibited in Horticultural Hall Under Auspices of Smithsonian Institution

 Mrs. William H. Forbes, Milton, Mass.
 Judge Robert W. Bingham, Louisville,

For the remainder of the week the school children of Greater Boston are privileged, through a special invitation offered by the Smithsonian Institution, to visit the exhibition in Horticultural Hall of wild flower prints. A second printing of this work, "North American Wild Flowers," the paintings in which are the work of Mary Vaux Walcott of Washington, with a simple and adequate digest of noted botanic authorities will be widely circulated in schools and colleges, public libraries and centers where its usefulness may have full scope.

Many of the patrons of this first edition, which is issued at $500, have already signified their intention of either loaning or presenting their copies to schools or groups to which its manifold possibilities would be especially valuable.

Groups of school children from Brookline, Cambridge and the Boston schools will, the superintendents of the various districts have assured George W. Berliner who is in charge of the exhibition as representative of the Smithsonian Institution, be given opportunity to pay leisurely, supervised visits to the exhibition during this week, in the charge of teachers whose courses are collateral with the subject of the pictures.

Although the school edition will not be available for some months, it was the opinion of those directing the exhibition that students should have an opportunity to inspect and become acquainted with this remarkable book, even sooner than it becomes part of their cultural possession. The volume is largely pictorial yet it is adequately informative in the matter of correlative notes, pro-viding a knowledge of the lesser as well the more familiar of native plants and flowers.

. In response to the question con-cerning differences existing between the present limited edition and the second edition, it must be said that although the pages of the later is-sue will be a little smaller and the paper a shade less sumptuous, it is all but impossible to distinguish between the reproductions in the two editions by the four color process. William Edwin Rudge, printer in New York City, has brought forth unerringly the full beauties of all the by the Smithsonian Institution, that the increasing group for which this should have pictures of native wild flowers which by customary stand-ards were judged "good." Every ef-fort was made to have this book representative not only of a hitherto unachieved artistic standard but to have its printing, its paper and type, of surpassing beauty and enduring

BOND INVESTING BY STATE, ASKED

Bill Would Give Treasurer Broader Financing Power, Author Points Out

A bill seeking to give the state reasurer the right to invest in state and municipal bonds, as are now authorized to be purchased by the savings banks in the State, was filed with the clerk of the House today by Henry L. Shattuck, Representaive from Boston, on behalf of William S. Youngman, state

The purpose of the bill, it was explained by the treasurer today, is to provide a broader market for the bonds, a larger earning power and a diversification for the state's investments, and to retain the same degree of safety that savings banks

In a statement discussing the bill, the treasurer said today:
"The purpose of this bill is to authorize the state treasurer to invest in such state and municipal bonds, but not in any corporation bonds, as are authorized to be purchased by the savings banks of Massachu-setts or by the savings departments of trust companies in Massachusetts. "Chapter 168 of the General Laws was amended by chapter 209 of the Acts of 1925 so that the purchase of municipal bonds by savings banks was limited to cities and towns that had been incorporated at least 25 years prior to the date of such investment. This prevents the purchase of bonds of 'mushroom' cities and towns that have had considerable growth in connection with a real estate boom but have not been tested as to permanent prosperity over period of 25 years or longer.

is defined in Article 22 of the Treaty of Versailles, involves the obligation of advanced nations, and indeed of civilization in general, to look after the interests of "peoples not yet able to stand by themselves under the strenuous conditions of the modern world." The "peoples" in-cluded in the mandatory system are the former German colonies and the Turkish provinces conquered by the Allies during the war.

The Peace Conference divided the German colonies into two classes—those to be administered under the Class B mandate plan, which, according to paragraph 5 of Article 22, made the mandatory responsible for the administration of the territory subject to conditions guaranteeing the welfare of the inhabitants; and those under the Class C plan to be administered, according to paragraph 6 of Article 22, under the laws of the mandatory as integral portions of its territory, but subject to safe-guards in the interests of the indigenous population. The Class B mandates are in Central Africa.

The mandatory system was adopted as the alternative to annexation which according to prenexation which according to pre-armistice agreements, had been re-pudiated by the Allies. Yet at the Peace Conference it seemed that the majority of the victors were in favor majority of the victors were in ravor of annexation. Even after the mandatory system had been worked out and adopted, which in point of fact was done after long and acrid discussion, the British delegates, the Dominion Premiers, and the Japanese delegates carried on the most persistent efforts to dispose of the persistent efforts to dispose of the German colonies by annexation. It was this action which accounted for was this action which accounted for the long delay in the appointment of the mandatory powers for these two classes of mandates, which was not done until May 7, 1919, although this was one of the very first mat-ters to be discussed at Paris.

Allocation of Turkish Provinces The whole situation is full of problems, intricate and delicate, but a student of the system under which the territories are administered sees progress in the gradual working out of the complicated structure. uprisings in Syria, and I found the whole region stirred and expectant. Although happening under a French administration in Syria, events in that territory had their local repercussions in Palestine and Irak. In fact, the whole Moslem world reflects the action. I found obvious indications of this in Egypt on my way to the Near East.

My special study of Palestine was begun just a few months after the arrival of a new British High Commissioner, Lord Plumer, a non-Jew, which in itself helped to change the aspect of the conflict between the Arabs and the Jews. Sir Herbert Samuel, a Jew and a Zionist, had served as High Commissioner for five years, undoubtedly the most critical period for the Palestine mandate, and it must be said that his service was marked by impartiality and exceptional ability as an administrator. ceptional ability as an administrator The sending of a military man, how-ever, has the psychological effect of relieving the tension.

ACTION IS SOUGHT ON IRRIGATION PLAN

Urged Before Congress

PORTLAND, Or .. , Jan. 9 (Special Correspondence)-A delegation to ask Congress to authorize the Columbia River basin project will be sent to Vashington, it has been decided, by the executive committee of the Columbia Basin Irrigation League, in session here. The delegation also will ask a small appropriation to keep the work moving.

"The project will consist of the irrigation of 1,883,000 acres at a cost of $158 an acre," explained Harvey Lindley, president of the league, a resident of eattle. Wash. "Engineers estimate that it will require 10 years to build and another 10 years for settlement. There are now 44,000 farm homes in the area. At the rate he population of the United States is increasing there will be 44,000,000 more people in this country when the project is built and settled than there are today, so there is no likelihood of overproduction."

Favorable report on the feasibility of the project has been brought in by the Columbia Basin Commission. The report stated that the land is fertile, the water supply adequate, and climatic conditions make pos-sible large yields of farm crops and a variety of orchard and garden

Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior, in a report made last month, spoke highly of the Columbia basin.

Permanence of Canada— Atlantic Transit Co.

Continuance of the Canada-Atantic Transit Company, rail and lake line operating between New England and the middle West, via terest. the Great Lakes, and in connection assured by a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission.
This is in accordance with word received from Washington today by William H. Day, manager of the transportation bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. The service offred by this line is of vast importance to New England's grain, feed and flour merchants, who have invested more than $1,000,000 in socalled transit mills, located on Northern New England Rail Lines, served by this company.

The decision finds that a perma nent emergency exists which justifles continuance of this line's authority to file changes in tariff rates on one day's notice instead of the customary 30 days, said Mr. Day. Existence of this line depended on its ability to compete with those not subject to I. C. C. jurisdiction, and which could change their tariff at will. Discontinuance of the ative until approved by the Govern Canada-Atlantic line it was pointed and Council, was filed by Chaunce out might mean higher transportation charges to many New England points, and serious inconvenience under certain conditions in moving grain This case has been pending for Columbia Basin Project to Be nearly a year, attracting wide attention among New England shippers and receivers of freight. The line offers desirable west-bound transportation facilities for New England manufactured products that is considered equally important to the east-bound grain movement, particularly when the other so-called standard lines are congested or embargoed, points out Mr. Day.

"The high cost of butter production compared with the cost in Minnesota and Iowa, which compete for the New England trade," said Dr. Cance, "makes it necessary to give attention to superior quality. Vermont can supply only a small part of the New England butter demand. To make the best butter requires high-grade cream and expert butter

"Whatever the milk plants do, the butter factories should (1) form a standards of cream which farmers must meet; (3) to make high-quality standards of butter enforced by the local society, and made certain by adequate inspection on the part of the sales agency; (4) to adopt a trade-mark and brands to be placed on the best butter after inspection; (5) to spend money for continuous advertising; (6) to engage in an active selling campaign.

The best form of milk marketing organization is a much debated question. Whatever the answer, it must be one that places the responsibility of intelligent marketmakers. To sell it to the best advantage requires a trade-mark, a guarantee of quality, a first-class phasizes quality of product and sales manager, and a sufficient regulated production rather than a amount to supply the market. To fail at any point is to invite total failure. Competition is keen. Eternal work and vigilance are essential.

Seldom did the amateurs show the same extreme brilliance in speed as they did on Saturday. Intermitently they flashed out into keen attacks, but for the most time they were concerned with defense. As a matter of fact it would be hard to overpraise the defenders, especially the goalkeeper, B. H. Baker, and fullbacks, A. G. Bower and A. E. Knight. The amount of work these players did was prodigious.

The professionals, on the other hand, played much more convincingly than at Crystal Palace. Their halfbacks and backs smothered most of Corinthians' attacks before they could get properly under way, while the for-

BOSTON CLUBS TO MEET IN SPRING

For the second straight season, base-ball followers of Boston will have the ball followers of Boston will have the opportunity of seeing the two Boston major league baseball teams in action against each other. According to the announcement this morning at Fenway Park of the spring exhibition rames of the Boston American League Baseball Club, the Braves and Red Sox will again engage in a two-game series on April 8 and 10. Last year, it will be remembered that the first game only was played, the Bravés winning 4 to 3. The second game was called because of poor weather conditions. Theer are 18 games on the Red Sox exhibition list for the coming spring, most of them with the New Orleans club, where the major league team trains. With the exception of the games with the Braves no contests have been arranged with other major league teams.

Arrangements for the start from Boston have not been completed with the railroads as yet but the squad is due in New Orleans Feb. 28 and training will begin Mar. 1. There are 36 players on the full squad which sounds a bit small compared to the huge squad of 60 that the Braves are taking south this spring.

From Mar. 7 to 28 the Red Sox will play seven games with New Orleans. The team than goes to Mobile for two games, Mar. 29 and 30 and on the March 31 and April 1 will play in Birmingham. Four games will be played with Louisville, April 3 to 6, inclusive, and the team arrives in Boston for its April 7 scheduled games with the Braves on the two dates mentioned. The final game of the spring schedule will be at Hartford, April 11.

Baseball Club pitchers and catchers, in charge of manager Rogers Hornsby, will leave here Feb. 20 for Hot Wells, a ruburb of San Antonio, Tex., to begin training. These batterymen, augmented by those who will journey to camp direct from their winter habitats, will number about 25 players when the conditioning season opens Monday, Feb. 22.

The idea of such a league and the advantages to be gained by it are not new to close followers of hockey; but the fact that it is a practical certainty for hext year is welcome information. Montreal is certain to have one or two teams since both Leo Dandurand, Canadlen manager, and James S. Strachan, Marcon manager, are taking more than kindly toward the idea and each man is desirous of fostering a team independently.

should bring results against Iowa on Saturday and Northwestern on Monday. In their first two games the Hoosiers scored 31 points each, defeating Minnesota by three points and losing to Wisconsin by two. This shows a need of better defense and Coach Everett Dean has the talent to develop it if he chooses to sacrifice emphasis on the offensive for that purpose. J. E. Krueger '27, forward, who made four baskets against Minnesota and five against Wisconsin, is developing into one of the best point getters in the league.

At Iowa the Hoosiers encounter a team that appears lacking in scoring power, though it defeated Chicago, 18 to 13, in the opening game. When closely guarded, as at Michigan, Coach J. M. Barry's quintet appear to need more weightand speed in the attack. If Indiana noglects defense against them they may hit the basket more freely. The Victorias, with a landly, won last night's Hockey League game from Portland. The final score of what might be classed as one of the most evenly played games here this season was Only 48 seconds remained to play when Frederickson netted the goal. The play was made on a short pass from Halderson, who had carried the puck practically the entire length of the ice. There were no scores in the first period which found both teams bat-tling on even terms. The second period was 17m. 32s. old when Victoria went into the lead on the first score of the game. Walker drove the rubber into the net unassisted. Portland tied the score in the third period by taking long chances and pressing every advantage. Trapp took the puck in his own territory, nursed it along to the Victoria ice, where he made a fine pass to Captain Irvin, who scored. Fourteen minutes later Hay and Doraty worked the puck to within striking distance of the Vic-toria goal where Hay counted. Victoria tied it up again a few minutes later when Patrick made a brilliant spurt down the ice to score unassisted.

Much Interest Shown In a trip I made from Chihuahus City to the Pacific coast two years ago I found only two government and three private schools. One of these had been established and run by Tarahumara Indians. Each pupil contributed from 25 centavos to 1 peso (50 cents American money) per month. Some of the children came on foot over the mountain trails, six or seven miles, spent eight hours in the school, and walked back home again in the late afternoon. They were all intensely interested in their work and were learning Spanish rapidly.

The Indians, mostly children and young men, had built the school building, a great roomy barnlike structure, and had furnished it with rough benches. When they heard I was from the Mexican National University, they asked me to request the Minister of Instruction to furnish them with school books and othe volumes for a library, which I did on my return to Mexico City. The books were given them; and the pu-Magnus Enckell's work, one can see the increased seriousness and selfanalysis that stamp his later works, above all in his noble drawings for the stained glass windows in the Abo Cathedral. A deepening of meaning as well as a severe monumental treatment, a greater intensity of expression combined with calmer and more homogeneous color scheme are the noticeable rugged sailor men, and that noble yet tragic portrait, "The Captain's Wife," which had the award of the Carnegie Prize at the National Academy, 1924, the large gallery seems alive with the shy faces of children who have been gathering flowers or have their toys out of doors, the waters of the ocean gleaming in the backgrounds. "Joe Hawthorne," a lad with his violin, looking toward the remote distance, tugs at one's heart strings. "Evelyn Chambers" is a masterly composition such as the artist likes for its color and ways of handling the brush.

After the labors at the large summer school of Provincetown, Mr. Hawthorne turns aside from the tately portraits of Mrs. William R. Looking upon these various recent portraits and studies, it is seen how inevitable it was that he should win his place upon merits that were so intrinsically his own.

Goldbeck invariably painted with he gusto of a constant enthusiasm. He had an attack to his brushmanship that kept his performances free from the unessential. He had, too, a considerable range of interest in the altogether making a stimulating and types that make up the world at large, so that the list of portraits is never monotonous. It is even said -I do not know how accuratelythat he did not see the town of Plymouth, two hours' journey from his Cambridge home, until after he wrote the Courtship of Miles Standish. And if it is urged that we should test him by his finished product and not by his method, one may answer by pointing to the poems themselves and asking whether is in Evangeline any sharp definition most sophisticated and thoroughly of detail or in Miles Standish any contemporaneous reader need not be clear realization of the Puritans as been reconsidering, lately, the po-etry of Longfellow—especially if I hasten on to say in the same breath that I have traveled these "backward steps" in company with an eleven-year-old son. Everyone admits that Longfellow is the Poet of Childhood, and it will be charitably assumed that I am reading him merely him the same that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him the same him that I am reading him merely him that I am reading him him that I am reading him that I am reading him him that I am reading him him that I am reading him him that assumed that I am reading him merely is abundantly its own excuse for to revive the memory of my own being. Beside: being wholly out of place, the moralizing in his verse is a boy; and possibly to discover by almost always shallow, second-hand, place, the moralizing in his verse is almost always shallow, second-hand, unearned. + + +

Taken together, these admissions make a heavy indictment against which only a poet of true power could bear up. I judge that Longfellow is a poet of power because honest craftsman in verse who turned out the sort of thing he thought the market would absorbtheir eagerness to shape freshly and originally the literature of today and of tomorrow.

"But how is this?" exclaims any member of any of the groups just mentioned. "Do you not see that Longfellow, in addition to being hopelessly out of date, is sentimental, didactic, imitative, fack-luster and bookish?"

Publishers' Agent 107 Falmouth St., Back Bay Station search students in residence. This year there are about 20 of the total number of some 250 research students who hail from the United Str.tes. Graduates of Cambridge University are the most numerous group. versity are the most numerous group. e United States furnish the second largest number, followed by the universities of Wales, Canada, London, and India, in the order named.

Among the American students enrolled for advanced work this year are two young women, both taking their major work in natural science, on in physics, the other in biochemistry. Both have had experience in research laboratories, the one in Peking College, the other in the laboratories of the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N. Y. Both emters of Newnham College, Cambridge.

Several members of the American colony at Cambridge hold honorary fellowships awarded for scholastic attainments or recognized ability in their A'ma Maters, or in a wider field. Thus one student holds a research fellowship awarded by the Rockefeller International Education Board of New York City. At least two members of the group are wearers of the Phi Beta Kappa key, indicating that they were at or near the top of their classes in classical or academic subjects as undergrad-uates. One or two of the research students taking advanced courses in the sciences are members of Sigma XI honorary scientific fraternity. Several of these American students have taken a certain amount of graduate work in American universities, some hold masters' degrees, one man has studied at New York University, Columbia, Johns Hopkins, and Oxford and is spending the present college year at Cambridge.

Classical subjects, English literature, history and international law appreciated. claim the attention of a larger num ber of these American students of English literature under Professor Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. This is not to be wondered at for "Q," as he is familiarly known in Cambridge circles, has a reputation as a teacher and author that extends far beyond the confines of the British Isles. Among the subjects which these students of literature are using as subjects for their dissertations are, English anthologies, Scottish reviewers of the Georgian period. Eliza-bethan drama, early English plays, King Lerr, Keats as a literary critic, and the position of Emerson in his century.

Among the eastern universities Harvard Columbia, and Dartmouth each have more than one graduate in the Cambridge list, while Cornell, Yale, Princeton, Georgetown, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology must depend on a single man to represent them with honor at Cambridge.

Only Since the War

The Ph. D. degree has been offered at Cambridge only since the war. Since this degree was added to the list of those offered at Cambridge, about 100 have been granted, together with a smaller number of D. Sc. degrees and a much larger number of M. A, degrees. The M. A. degree is the one held by a majority of the well-known men at Cambridge and can only be taken after six years have elapsed since the granting of the B. A. degree. In general the only masters' degrees recognized by Cambridge University are its own and those from the universities of Oxford and Dublin. By the same token it is a very difficult matter for the holder of the B. A. degree from any university outside this tri-umvirate to obtain a Cambridge M. A. degree. Cambridge is conservative also about admitting research students from American colleges and universities, except those on the "approved list," which is not a long

Once admitted, the facilities for graduate study and research work at Cambridge are indeed excellent. There is very little red tape to circumscribe one's activities, no "mi-nors" and "majors" to worry about, and every encouragement to do a real piece of individual research 'n one's chosen field. Attendance at lectures is purely incidental, one can take on as few or as many as one chooses. Let it be said here that while the terms at Cambridge are short, only eight weeks, they are full of activity while they last. There are no quizzes and few examinations until the final one, at which time it is expected that the candidate for a degree will have done a goodly amount of outside reading, will be familiar with the literature of his subject and will have produced a creditable original dissertation. A study of the dissertations which have been accepted by the board of re-search studies in the past will con-vince any one that the standard set is a high one.

His Sunday morning breakfasts in his college rooms for small groups of congenial research students are a popular and famous feature of the graduate school of Cambridge University. One also is likely to feel that he is indirectly responsible for seeing that no American research student is so unfor-tunate as to have his name left off the list of those entertained by another member of the university on Thanksgiving Day, when but for this occasion one might not know the good old New England holiday had arrived, for school and other activities. ities go on as usual in old England.
In the past it has been possible in special cases for persons to be granted the Cambridge Ph.D. degree after being in residence for as short a time as one year. The university senate has only recently passed a strict rule providing that in the future no one can under any cir-cumstances get a degree without spending at least two years "in statu pupillari" in Cambridge. This action is based on the general desirability of keeping Cambridge standards of graduate study up to the very high mark set in the past and of raising them in certain respects. A second motive for the recent action of the university senate in tightening up on the residence requirement is the perfectly obvious fact that no one can possibly hope to gain an adequate or even partially complete understanding of university life in Cambridge in the short space of one year. This life has to be seen and lived to be

Your scenery should be high enough so that a front row audience will not see the top, and broad enough to give you as large a room as possible on your stage, leaving space for actors, scene-shifters, and property men to walk behind (Fig. I). Four of the pieces, C, D, E and F, are of the same dimensions; one is plain, one has a window, one a door toward the left, the other a door toward the right. The two narrower pieces, A and B, are over half the width of these, and are plain. A and B usually form the front ends of your om, bent back like wings.

For frame-work you can use all kinds of light wood if you are inenious about fitting and supporting it. If you buy wood, get inexpensive lumber 3 x % inches. Figure II shows how the frames are sup-ported by diagonals. With the added weight of window and doors you need small additional diagonals wherever you have room. Where the frame-work is joined brace it with corner irons or straight irons. Mitered corners, as pictured on B, are stronger than square ends, as on three corners of C. Your door frames are built exactly like A and B, covered with the same material as your scenery or else with a piece of beaverboard, and are painted like

Market Movements Are Less Spectacular—Tone Is Irregular

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (A) - Stock NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (49) — Stock prices fluctuated within narrow limits at the opening of today's market, failing to follow a clearly defined trend.

Buying interest was at a low ebb, although a few of the public utilities moved up under the leadership of Public Service of New Jersey, which rose a point to a new high level.

Motors Are Weak

Motors Are Weak

Renewed weakness of the motors was disconcerting to bullish operators, and realizing in other speculative issues caused later sympathetic recessions. Investment stocks, however, particularly the fire insurance and high-priced equipment and public utility shares were buoyant. Continental Insurance and Fidelity Phenix Insurance rose 5 points, and McCrory Stores B., Railway Steel Spring. Crory Stores B., Railway Steel Spring. Western Union, Nash Motors, Nash-ville, Cattanooga & St. Louis and Op-penheim Collins 3 to 4. Their strength ultimately caused a cessation of selling elsewhere, the market again tending upward at noon.

Call loans renewed at 4½ per cent.

Bonds Continue Upward The upward movement of bond rices continued unchecked today as ouying orders were spread over a broad list of railroad, industrial and foreign obligations.

Formal announcement that Mexico was ready to resume payments on its external debt exerted a tonic influence on Mexican bonds, most of the assented issues on the New York Stock Exchange rising a point or more.

FRENCH COTTON TEXTILE MARKETS ARE LESS ACTIVE

The cotton yarn and cloth markets of France have slowed down greatly since the beginning of November on account of political uncertainties, wild fluctuations of exchange, and seasonal factors making for dullness at the end of the year, says the Cotton Informa-tion Service of the Merchants National Bank of Boston.

and weaving mills are not sold so far ahead as they were a month or two ago. However, the spinning mills probably have forward business on their books equal to 25 or 27 weeks' output, and the weaving mills have orders equal to 22 weeks' output. Thus the unfilled orders of the French mills are still very high.

In consequence, French yarn and cloth prices do not show any weakening. In fact, the spinners and weavers are in such a strong position that some of them refuse to make offers and name quotations. They could sell much, farther ahead if they wished to, but are unwilling to make more distant commitments. The situation is very satisfactory for the present, but the future is uncertain. HOLLINGER GOLD MINES, LTD. TORONTO, Ont. Jan 12 (Special Correspondence)—The remarkable results achieved by the Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines, Ltd., are well illustrated by recently issued figures Before the end of January of this year output from the Hollinger will pass the $100,000,000 mark. Dividends of $30,500,000 to the end of 1925; a surplus of more than $9,000,000 on hand at the end of 1925, and an ore reserve of around $60,000,000 developed.

BRITISH TRADE BALANCE LONDON, Jan. 14—Great Britain's adverse trade balance for 1925, roughly £395,000,000 ($1.896.000,000), is the greatest in the country's history. The previous record was £341,800 000 in 1924. Imports increased £45,000,000 and exports fell £23,000,000. There was an increase of more than £20,000,000 on rubber during the year.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14—J. P. Morgan & Co. have leased the entire eighth floor of the new Bank of America Building which will be completed about May 1. Leasing of these quarters is due to razing of the Mills Building on May 1 in which J. P. Morgan & Co. have offices at present.

Although modeled on the lines of the co-operative banks, it will embrace many features not found in these enterprises, and is framed principally to accommodate borrowers of larger amounts. In lieu of a "guaranty fund," the bank will have at the outset paid-up guarantors' shares totaling $500,000. These have already been underwritten.

As the bank grows, new guarantors' shares will be issued so that their total will equal 5 per cent of liabilities. Whereas the co-operative bank can loan only a maximum of $8000, the new bank will loan amounts of $15,000 and upward for construction of homes or mercantile buildings.

In the ordinary co-operative bank, installment shares—as distinct from guarantors' shares—have an ultimate value of $200, being paid for at the WASHINGTON, Jan. 14 (P)-Im ports of the United States for 1925 were valued at $4,224.225,962 and ex-ports were $4,908,743,259, leaving a balance of trade favorable to the United States of $684,517,297.

983,845 but the favorable trade balance was greater, being $981,021,266. The December imports in 1925 were larger than those of any other month since March, 1923. The exports, however, were smaller than those of October. They were slightly larger than December of last year, but were exceeded by November, 1924.

The Unted States was a net loser of gold for the year, gold imports for 1925 being $128,273,172 against exports of $262,639,790. In 1924 gold imports were $319,720,918 against exports of $61,648,313.

Proposed Mortgage Bank to The proposed Mortgage Eank of Massachusetts, a bill for incorporation of which has been filed in the state House of Representatives, will, if put guarantors' shares—have an ultimate value of $200, being paid for at the rate of $1 a share per month, and maturing in 147 months at 5 per cent interest or 139 months at 6 per cent.

Under the new scheme, installment shares would have ultimate values of $100, $200, $300, $400 or $500. Therefore the borrower would have greater latitude in the period for paying off his loan, particularly desired in case of large construction enterprises.
To give a wider market for the shares, members would not be re-shares, members would not be restricted in the number of paid-up or matured shares they may own. There would be no differentiation between these two types of shares, both being classes as "full-paid shares."

While the Mortgage Bank of Massa-chusetts would have several features.

The bank would chiefly accomm date that class of borrowers not taken care of by savings banks, which desire first mortgages mainly on completed structures, and those borrowers who find accommodation by the mortgage bond companies too expensive. Behind the enterprise are a long list of petitioners, including many promi-nent real estate men and bankers. It promises to be an interesting banking venture, if not killed by political oppo-

FIFTIETH YEAR OF

W. S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, reminds stockholders that 1926 is the fiftieth anniversary year during this period, he said, the tele-phone has played an important and vital part, having been an important factor in the growth of the country, and has contributed in large measure to the general progress. "The achievements of the past," he said, "point to even greater achievements in the future, and we expect that 1926, our semicentennial year, will be a year of continued progress in the development and use of the telephone.

The record showing was in 1920 with $29,000,000, and next to that came 1923 with $23,000,000. In 1924 the big fruit company turned in net of $17,-294,000, or $17.29 a share. It looked up to very late last year as though 1925 might be easily the second best year, especially as the first half year had turned in $13,500.000 net before taxes, but the company got no help from sugar.

That department for the third successive cessive year was in red ink despite the fact that production costs were the lowest in a decade, and refining costs were the lowest on record.

Had any attempt been made, how-ever, to modify the strict depreciation charge policy, sugar operations would have swung over into black ink. The outlook for sugar is measurably better this year with promise of better prices and a production of 1,200-000 bags as compared with 1,095,545 bags last year, and 751,932 the year before.

United Fruit all told has some $56,-000,000 invested in the sugar business, and in the normal course of events is bound to extract a fair business return bound to extract a fair business return
Cash holdings at the year-end amounted to the impressive figure of $29,000,000, or more than twice the $14,000,000 of the year before. It is only fair to point out that this increase arose from the liquidation of $11,000,000 British and American Government security holdings and the transfer to this side of the water from the subsidiary Elder & Fyffes tre's-

ury, incidentally, at a nice exchange profit, of balances that had been ac-cumulating against the day when sterling would return to its normal Blg Gain in Surplus

United Fruit's profit and loss surplus rose from $51,000,000 to $72,000,000 at the end of last year, equivalent to $72 a share on the capital stock. Surplus was, of course, naturally augmented by the fact that the company failed to take dividend action in December for the following 12 months as has been the case for the last two years. It thereby was under no necessity for setting up a dividend reserve for 1926.

United Fruit directors meet for dividend reserve for 1926.

United Fruit directors meet for divi-dend action Feb. 9, and while com-ment over the possible declaration is quite unofficial, it seems entirely likely in view of the 1925 splendid earnings, and unusual cash and surplus strength that something more than $2.50 will be forthcoming.

United Fruit last year expanded its earnings by the sound commercial policy of increased volume and lower margin of profit. While per unit banana profit was much less the combanana profit was much less the company did an appreciably large business—about 15 per cent. Banana importations into the United States in 1925 were 54,000,000 stems, compared with 47,000,000 in 1924, and United Fruit regularly does about 52 per cent of the total business. total business.

CLOTH MARKET INACTIVE WITH PRICES STEADY

Volume Sold Thus Far Disappointing-Fine Goods Call Expanding

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 14 (Special)—Disappointment is being expressed in many sections of the primary cotton goods markets because the demand for goods has failed to the demand for goods has failed to become active as yet.

Many have been predicting a very strong revival in activity early in the new year but so far there has been nothing to fulfill the predictions.

A steady flow of small orders has taken place during the last week sufficient in volume to absorb most of the current production. But there has been no forward contracting in a large been no forward contracting in a large been no forward contracting in a large way.

Prices have remained steady, and in certain lines of goods there has been tendency to shade the current market levels.

There has been an encouraging volume of inquiry and the interest displayed by buyers has led many of the long experienced merchandisers of gray goods to believe that the period of heavy trading is not far off. The National Wholesale Drygoods Association is to hold its convention in New York next week, and a great many large buyers from all parts of the country will be present in the market at that time.

"For years," he said, "transportation has been the means of promoting international intercourse, and whatever improves transportation and brings about a facility of intercourse of that type, has a beneficent mission to perform."

Motor trucks and busses have been carefully studied and their function and methods of operation analyzed in the meeting of the congress, which ended yesterday. Delegates from New Zealand, Germany and elsevent of the development of motor transportation in mass form a means of developing rural districts ers to jump in a week or two early.

Yarn Fabric Demand Fair

In the print cloth yarn fabrics, there has been a fair demand for the medium and high count goods in small lots, and some buyers have succeeded in getting inside prices a quatter or an eighth under the general market. This has applied particularly to the 68x72s and the 80x80s, four yard, the former being bought for forward delivery as low as 9%c, while the latter sold steadily at 12c, with very occasional shading to a slight degree.

For quick goods a premium of an eighth to three-eighths of a cent was charged on both constructions. On standard 64x60s there were sales for March delivery made as low as 8%c, but 8%c was the more general quotation both for forward goods and for early deliveries.

On the 60x48s there were sales of spot goods at 7%c, but forward deliveries went as low as 7%c.

In the sheeting constructions there was some business placed at very close prices, and these included some of the coarser numbers, and also some of the higher count constructions. Yarn Fabric Demand Fair higher count constructions.

Bag Makers Cautious Bag makers were buying in a very Bag makers were buying in a very moderate way, to cover only their present needs, but many were keeping very closely in touch with prices, and more business in volume is expected to come shortly from that quarter.

Ginghams, percales, pajama checks, and similar coarser yarn goods were moving very modestly, though some of the fancy types with rayon decorations were said to be meeting with considerable favor. Printed goods have been slowing down, but are still movconsiderable favor. Printed goods have been slowing down, but are still moving fast enough to take care of current production.

Fall River reports a more active week to begin the new year, and total sales reached the neighborhood of 100,000 pieces, much of which was sateens and twills, put through at the close of the week. There was also some low-count business, and more especially on the narrow widths.

In the fine-goods markets, there is a different story to tell, for mills and manufacturers report a steadily expanding call for goods.

Production schedules are being gradually increased in spite of the fact that both spinners and weavers are determined not to pile up un-sold mer-chandise. Some of the equipment idle only a week or two ago is running full blast now, and there is every prospect of still further expansion of out-put unless the expected January.

It is possible that this conclave may be responsible for starting the expansion in the current gray goods trading that has so long been awaited. Many expect it will, but the general sentiment on the subject has not yet become sufficiently crystallized to cause any considerable number of buyers to jump in a week or two early.

Transatlantic Travel Gains The unofficial figures of passengers carried by transatlantic lines during Delaware, and to call it the Ameri- 1925 indicate a large gain as compared with the previous year. A total of $25,000 passengers is computed, which compares with 700,000 passengers in 1924. The movement was fairly evenly divided between east and west bound passengers, the excess in the west bound being accounted for, of course, by the immigrants brought into New York. All lines are included in the figures.

Offers of rubber plantations and properties were presented at the committee meeting, it was announced, from Brazil, Ceylon, old German East Africa, Colombia and Cuba.

The special tourist travel is considered to have had its first intensive test in the year just passed, 1926 is expected to exceed the records of 1925. Based to exceed the records of 1925. Based upon advance requests for information, together with the figures of 1925 travel steamship men consider it a conservative estimate to forecast an increase for the present year.

Whether the tourist busines actually returns a profit to the companies cannot be positively said. Shipping men questioned state that while the tourists may perhaps more than pay the actual cost of their transportation and food, the net results do not represent a sub-stantial profit. Officials of steamship lines questioned aver that immigrant traffic and a large volume of freight are essential to produce earnings equal to those of the pre-war years.

North Coast Cruises

The Norwegian-America Line is sending its steamship Bergensfjord on a cruise to the North Cape and land of the "Midnight Sun" leaving New York in July. The Carinthia of the Cunard Line is making a similar cruise, the popularity of this route for summer cruises resulting in an increase in the number of ships and passengers annually. More special cruises are expected to be offered during the coming summer than has heretofore been the case.

A failure of a special cruise, however, is more of a loss than the immediate out of pocket expense of operating the ship for a small number of passengers who make the cruise spread the word that it was poorly patronized which shipping men explain casts a reflection upon the company.

NOVA SCOTIA FISH FINDS NEW MARKETS

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 16 (Special Correspondence)-The sale of Nova Scotian fresh fish is rapidly assuming very large proportions in Great conservative estimate to forecast an Britain and on the Continent. Thousands of dollars' worth of fish, hitherto considered worthless by Nova Scotian fishermen, and for which in the past there has been absolutely no market, are now being shipped to England and Scotland, France and Holland. This is the result of diligent efforts on the part of a large Halifax fish corporation, covering a period of two years, during which time a thorough investigation was made of the opportunities which Great Britain and European countries might offer for eastern Canadian fish.

The commercial shipments, following a number of very successful experimental consignments, began about three months ago, and have now increased to two and three shipments a week. They are sent directly from Halifax by transatlantic lines. calling here, and the firm interested. has a permanent representative in London to direct distribution and marketing on that side. The trade is now reported by Arthur Boutilier, president of the Canadian Fish Association, as firmly established and promising well for the future.

"First the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear"

EDITORIALS

The American Society of Newspaper Editors, numbering among its members the authorita-

Segregating Crime News

tive editorial heads of many, if not a majority, of the principal daily newspapers of the United States, begins its annual meeting at Washington tomorrow. Organized for the purpose of establishing ethical standards for the profession of journalism, and affording opportunity for the interchange of helpful views and experiences, the society has passed the experimental stage and now enters upon its fourth year of activity. Among the subjects for discussion at the first session is the practice of "Segregating Crime News," a partial concession made by several newspapers of late to the very general reaction against the practice of making stories of crime the most prominent feature of a daily newspaper.

So far as we know, The Christian Science Monitor is the only newspaper in the world which refuses to print accounts of crime as such. It departs from this policy only when some criminal offense produces results that affect the course of history or menace the stability of society. It would, for example, publish the news of the assassination of a ruler or a great figure in the world of industry or finance, while ignoring other offenses against the criminal law which to the journalistic mind would seem more sensational.

The Monitor has defended its course in this matter on the broad grounds of public policy. We have never believed, and do not now believe, that the publication of criminal news, in the way it is commonly handled in daily newspapers, is a deterrent to crime. Rather, it breeds crime through the insidious methods of suggestion. In this position we are upheld by most expert criminologists, even though the great majority of American newspapers sharply disagree

And yet there is evidence that back of this apparent disagreement there is a growing feeling that the policy advocated by the Monitor may after all be right. The very fact that segregation is to be discussed by the society of editors indicates the existence of a feeling that criminal news is at best an unclean thing, fitly to be thrust into a corner of the paper where only those who wish to gratify morbid appetites may

In the past year several newspapers have tested out this method. None has adhered to it, naturally enough, for it represents one of those compromises which can be satisfactory to neither side. But the very fact that it has been tried shows that the public protest against the exploitation of crime has been of sufficient proportions to lead newspaper publishers into a search for a device by which they can make apparent concessions to this moral demand, while still appealing to that large reading clientele which, admittedly, wants its crime stories and likes them raw and red.

As a result we have had the paper with no criminal news on the first page, the paper with segregated criminal news, the paper in which the punishment rather than the crime is exploited. None has been satisfactory to either the publisher putting profit above all else, or to the reader asking for a paper which shall be clean and intellectually profitable to its readers.

The discussion of this subject by the society of editors will be illuminating if at the outset the disputants reject the theory that mass circulation and inordinate financial profits are things chiefly to be sought in publishing a newspaper.

Appreciation of the services rendered to world peace by Justice Richard Feetham.

How the Irish Commission Reached Its Conclusions

president of the Irish Boundary Commission, in promoting agreement between the Free State and Ulster, will not be diminished by perusal of the dignified statement he has issued in the form of a letter to the British Prime Minister. This statement is on behalf of himself and Joseph R. Fisher, the member of the commission appointed by the British Government to represent the Ulster point of view. It takes the place of the judicial award which is not now to appear. It explains the well-thought out lines upon which the commission worked.

These lines were laid down by the commission itself, after hearing evidence from British, Free State, and Ulster jurists as to the correct interpretation of Article XII of the Anglo-Irish Treaty which contained the commission's sole terms of reference. The committee held that these terms empowered them to transfer territory to any extent from one side of the border to the other. Changes so made, however, were to be limited by certain considerations.

The basis of the existing boundary was thus to be adopted, unless sufficient reason, founded on considerations of which the commission could properly take account, was shown to the contrary. The wishes of the inhabitants were to be the determining factor, but changes made on this account were not to be so drastic as either to destroy the identity of Ulster or make it impossible for it to continue as a separate self-governing unit. The same was to apply equally to changes adversely affecting the area of the Free State.

The committee thus rejected Lord Birkenhead's view that border rectifications only were contemplated by the treaty. It also negatived that of Free State advocates, who had claimed that while the commission could transfer territory from the North to the South, it had no authority to make alterations in the contrary direction. The commission also decided that it was not required to adopt any particular type of local division as the unit of area in reference to which the wishes of the inhabitants should be ascertained, but was free to mark out for the purpose of its work as occasions required, convenient units in the light of these factors which it was to take into account-namely, wishes of inhabitants, and economic and geographic conditions.

It proceeded on these broad determining considerations, and the boundary it eventually drew up was one agreed upon unanimously by all three members of the commission, prior to the withdrawal of Professor MacNeill, the Free State representative. Justice Feetham regrets non-publication of the award in view of "the speculative and misleading statements" which have been current regarding it. But both he and his colleague, Mr. Fisher, say they acquiesce in this, in order not to interfere with or prejudice the prospect of the achievement of peace in Ireland upon the basis of mutual agreement. Justice Feetham, in conclusion, expresses "our earnest hope that the larger settlement accepted by both Irish Governments, for which the agreement provides, may bring to the people of Ireland benefits far greater than any which could have resulted from a new determination of boundaries, even if embodied in a unanimous award." It is a hope toward the realization of which his own contribution is

There is no denying the fact that a great many persons in the United States who are

conscientious and lawabiding have been persuaded to believe that selfish and evil influences have all but succeeded in making enforcement of the law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage impossible. It is interesting to study, briefly, the processes which have been employed by the cunning advocates of nullification to create this more or less widespread impression. To begin with, there were but a comparatively few who originally joined in the undertaking to create public sentiment against prohibition. The organized liquor traffic, represented by the distillers and brewers, had accepted as final the verdict of the country outlawing their business. In the first year following the date when the law became effective, its enforcement was more nearly complete than it has been at any time since. Gradually the discovery was made that addicts, and later others, would buy the adulterated wares surreptitiously hawked from door to door and in sheltered street corners and dark places by bootleggers. Then it was that the cry was first raised that the law was a failure. Many were quick to believe it.

The defeatist propaganda was aided, and has continuously been aided from that day to the present, by the outlawed liquor barons, scattered organizations of former saloonkeepers and bartenders, gangsters and criminals, profiteers who made fortunes which many lost in rumrunning, and the pernicious rectifiers of denatured alcohol which is still sold under cleverly devised labels which counterfeit once popular brands of foreign and domestic liquors. There is no denying the fact that for two or three years the traffic in these contraband and synthetic beverages increased tremendously. But it is true that the volume of the traffic never was as great or as menacing as the defeatist propagandists sought to make it appear. The effort has been, and still is, to create the impression that the whole structure of the law has been destroyed and that society, as a result, is on the verge of some terrible disaster.

It is time that a calm and appraising eye be cast upon the situation as it actually exists. One who sees conditions as they are realizes that the great structure is not even seriously threatened. A few months ago, both in Washington, where the national enforcement machinery has been set up, and in New York, where perhaps open violations of the law have been most common, there was undertaken a more or less complete reorganization of the enforcement units. Lincoln C. Andrews was given charge of the national squad, and Emory R. Buckner, United States District Attorney, took command of the legal forces in New York City. As a result, the rum fleet which hovered for months off the Long Island and New Jersey coasts has been driven out to sea. In New York, as is well known, hundreds of places where liquor was illegally sold have been closed and padlocked following suits brought by Mr. Buckner. In a recent statement by the District Attorney it was made to appear that 98 per cent of the liquor sold and consumed in that city during the last year was produced from denatured alcohol. This proves beyond doubt that the boasted theory that supplies are being obtained from rumrunners is a mere pretense, and that, to the extent of cutting off such supplies, the law is being enforced.

In New York, with the change of administration and the accession of George V. McLaughlin as Police Commissioner under Mayor Walker, there was almost simultaneously issued an order putting the entire police department behind United States Attorney Buckner in his effort to enforce prohibition. Mr. McLaughlin is quoted as having assured Mr. Buckner that every policeman in the city would be instructed to regard the Volstead law as just as valid as the law forbidding the carrying of concealed weapons.

The padlock has proved itself to be an effective weapon in the hands of federal enforcement agents and prosecutors, aided by the summary action of the courts. Now, with the aid of the metropolitan police, acting in unquestioned sympathy with the representative of the city administration, more darkened windows and deserted doorways will mark the progress of law enforcement. Since the repeal of the New York State enforcement code there has been no sympathetic aid by the police of the greater city to the federal officials in punishing the violators of the national law. And yet with all these facts, and with the knowledge that steady progress is being made in establishing enforcement upon a sound basis, the nullificationists are making the specious assertion that both Mr. Andrews and Mr. Buckner were appointed, not to enforce the law, but to prove to the country that the law cannot be enforced. Such a claim is the last resort of a defeated coterie of defeatists. The unholy traffic is being attacked in its flimsy and insecure strongholds and its weaknesses are being disclosed. How much longer are the champions of this lost cause to seek to persuade a hundred million free people that they are unable to govern themselves? How much longer is a credulous public to be influenced by the discredited propaganda of a lawless minority?

How unfailingly, though sometimes slowly, does each succeeding generation restore, in somewhat similar form or fashion, the customs, manners, and not infrequently the habits and fancies of its predecessor. Now, perhaps not unexpectedly, it is an-nounced that the splendors and glories of Saratoga Springs are to be rehabilitated and restored. It was soon after the close of the Civil War, when Ulysses S. Grant was President of the United States, that what was regarded as America's most famous and most popular spa was the resort of the great and near great, the ambitious leaders of society, and the claimants of uncounted wealth. Since that time, and until the present, its grandeurs have been allowed to

For a period following the early decline of Saratoga, rival watering places, as they were called, continued to bid for the patronage of those who were led to believe the mineral springs possessed some actual or potential curative properties. But most of these have languished with the passing of the belief, and the mountains, the seashore and the open road have, in turn, claimed the attention of the seekers after pleasure and the followers of the prevailing mode. Now, it is announced, a vast sum of public money will be devoted by the New York State Conservation Commission to a carefully planned effort to rehabilitate Saratoga and to popularize it as a resort. The estimated cost of the project is in the neighborhood of $6,000,000.

It might be interesting, even idly, to speculate upon the prospect of the success of this venture. It is the ambitious hope of the promoters to make Saratoga rival in its beauty the famous spas of Europe. But what if they succeed? Will anything worth while have been thereby accomplished? It should not be forgotten that, within the last few years, a tremendously important new factor has been injected into American life. Where once the leisure class, so called, seemed to enjoy inactivity, languid repose and studied indolence, those composing it now seek pleasure in touring either by automobile or upon the lakes and ocean. It is doubtful if those to whom free choice remains would voluntarily choose the sumptuous ease of what someone might tell them is a fashionable watering place, whatever the declared virtues of flowing springs.

It was related, a quarter of a century ago, that a more or less unsophisticated Texan parted with title to a tract containing mineral springs in his State, the sole consideration being a bond entered into by the purchaser agreeing to supply him, continuously thereafter, with all the water he cared to drink. With the waning popularity of the spas it may be that the bargain was not so one-sided a one after all.

Editorial Notes

While many "opinions" have been published in the past in the effort to show that upon the cropping of dogs' ears depends the popularity of certain strains, it would appear from an article prepared by Richard C. Craven, organizer nerican Humane Association, that they obtain their seeming force from the fact that the sentiment on the other side of the question is deliberately withheld. For he writes that a single one of the letters he makes public is of more account than the whole collection quoted in favor of cropping, and he adds that the English dog fanciers of the higher type are all in favor of the association's campaign. Thus, one could hardly ask for a stronger indorsement than the following: "I am altogether against cropping the ears of bull terriers-it is unnecessary cruelty." This is the opinion of one who specializes in England in bull terriers. Or this, from one well known as an exporter of highest class dogs to all parts of the world:

I am very interested about the cropping campaign in America. I am absolutely opposed to it and consider it most cruel, and I think unnecessary, as the dogs are just as smart without. I hope you will be successful in abol-

At this time, when so much space in newspapers and other publications is devoted either to deploring that America is not entering more into European politics or to expressing a fear that she is doing so, or is likely to do so, too much, it is instructive to notice the reaction which President Coolidge's recent speech has obtained in Europe. For example, the London Times is responsible for the statement that the realization is growing in England that the United States is not so "self-absorbed and selfsufficient" as a liberal interpretation of its official policy of isolation might suggest. And it goes on to say that Americans were never engaged in such wide and varied intercourse with the outside as during recent years. America is not out of the world; it is very much in it, it says. Browning had the right idea when he wrote, "Hand grasps hand, eye lights eye in good friendship, and great hearts expand, and grow one in the sense of this world's life."

One cannot help sympathizing somewhat with George Bernard Shaw in his latest plaint that "life is impossible unless one can be an insignificant private individual occasionally.' This lament he gave expression to when explaining his registration of a monomark—or code signature—used to preserve his anonymity. "My reason for taking out a private monomark is that I am what is called a celebrity," he said, adding, "It is sometimes excessively inconvenient to be a celebrity, because of the advertising value of a celebrated name." And then he made this comment, which indicates the trials and tribulations-unknown to the world at large—which such as he must endure:

If the unfortunate victim of his own notoriety writes for the price list of the latest shock absorber, he does so at the risk of finding ten cars at his door the next morning, demanding that he shall instantly leave his work and have a trial run. Eac.; car will be attended by a group of photographers, including one with a motion camera.

A Night on the Bridge

The dusk was falling as the passenger gained the high bridge, and Gravesend, where the ship had brought up to wait for the tide, was already invisible astern, though she had been under way but a few minutes, and the second mate and one of the crew, dim figures on the foredeck below, were still busy with winch and anchor.

It was a trifle misty, and the dark outline of the ship below seemed huge. The swish of the bow wave sounded loud in the surrounding silence, though she was only at half speed, and soon, out of the gathering shadows around, a multitude of lights appeared and glared in cold silence or blinked enigmatically.

The slim bridge, high above the dark swirling water, imparted a feeling of isolation and responsibility; and the passenger regarded with awe the muffled figure of the pilot, the man who read all those lights as a clear anguage, and to whom the way up the dark river winding into the heart of London was a familiar path.

The first mate on the bridge had just blown a shrill blast on his whistle to someone unseen on deck below, and the pilot turned from his steady gaze ahead to fix him with a cold and baleful glare from under bushy eyebrows. The passenger wondered what grievous error had been committed, and what happened to mates who committed them.

"Twenty minutes have I been on this ship," he said at length sternly, "and only now do you send for some soup. This is a disgracefully run ship," he added, turning to the grizzled captain. The latter's face relaxed into that smile that never failed to alleviate passengers' grievances.

4 4 4 "Do you remember," he said, "that night when you put your eup down and couldn't find it again for five minutes because it was so thick?" "I do," replied the pilot, "and it was stone cold when I found it. . . . The worst fog I ever remember," he added reminiscently.

"How," asked the passenger, perceiving that pilots were but human after all, "do you get up in a fog"? "Well, we know the bearing of the course up each of these reaches-this one, for instance, happens to be west-northwest. You steam on that bearing for the right amount of time, and you are then in the middle of the channel at the end of that reach—in theory. What actually happens is that you find the ship on shore trying to board a tramcar, or passing the same buoy three times. . . . Port a little."

"Port a little," in answer from the sphinxlike figure at the wheel, behind the shrouded glow of the binnacle light, swinging the spokes slowly over. "Steady." And the spokes swing back as the ship rounds the bend and steadies on her course up the next reach, and the glow in the sky that is London shows brighter behind the giant cranes on the quayside.

Dimly seen shapes in the darkness, the brown-sailed barges making their slow way up with the flood drop one by one astern; the huge, uncouth Woolwich ferryboat flounders slowly across, a mass of lights; fussy tugs pant by with the double lights and the last single light that marks the end of their string of lighters; lean, black police launches glide noiselessly past with silent, alert figures in the stern sheets; and everywhere are lights; lights large and small, gleaming and twinkling, red, white, and green, strung in rows or scattered as haphazard as the stars above them, and all moving, some fast, some slowly, but always changing, wheeling, disappearing.

How on earth do you distinguish them all?" queried the bewildered passenger. "By the odd lights, chiefly," replied the pilot; "if you asked me when I was ashore replied the pilot; "if you asked me when I was ashore to describe the lights of this reach, I don't suppose I could do it, though I see them often enough; but immediately we round that point, I know what's affoat in the reach by the odd, unfamiliar lights in the framework of the usual lights. That, for instance (he pointed to two small white lights on the port bow) is a barge well up on the bank; he must have gone ashore well on the top of the last tide."

"There's something without lights moving right ahead there," interjected the captain. "Yes, I've just seen him," replied the pilot; then "Stop her, sir. Hard aport." The engine room telegraph bell clanged in answer to the captain's signal; and the beat of the engines died away.

Gradually the unaccustomed eyes of the passenger made out the dark shape of a lighter, with two puny figures tugging at the huge oars. It was drifting across the bows only a short distance ahead, and a collision seemed inevitable. "We must go ahead of her now, sir. Full ahead. Steady." After what seemed to the passenger ages of suspense, the bows of the ship cleared the lighter by a few feet. "Hard astar" to swing the stern clear, and the hazard was past.

Another half hour brought Tower Bridge and the end of the journey in sight. The two tall towers and the flying bridge connecting their summits rose, clear-cut against the sky, above the Pool, where for centuries the great ships have lain under the shadow of the grim Norman fortress that the first William built to overawe the city. That night they were only tumbled masses of darker shadow against the banks, except where a mast of funnel cut the sky in company with the roofs and spires of the

+ + Beyond, a few yards from where the Roman bridge had stood, was London Bridge, never empty, even at midnight, with the lanterns casting flickering spears of light in the eddying tide. Very slowly, in answer to the red lights hoisted in the rigging, the two halves of the great center span of Tower Bridge swung upward in that most impressive gesture of welcome that opens the water gate of the city.

Very deftly the pilot swung the ship just beyond the bridge; waited ten minutes in the stream for another foot of water in the berth: and edged her foot by foot alongside the wharf, with only a few yards to spare ahead and astern; the fussing winches rattled; the warps were made fast and the voyage ended.

"A difficult business yours," remarked the passenger, taking his leave of the pilot. "Oh, no," replied the latter with a twinkle, "not if you bear in mind the Golden Rule: Steer where there aren't any lights, because it means there's nothing important there, and generally there may be some water. My next job-to beat the captain here at a round of golf tomorrow—now that is a diffi-cult business."

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Rome

So great has been the defeat of the combined opposition parties in Italy that one seldom finds their mention in the daily chronicle of events. The Unitarian Socialist Party, which has twenty-four representatives in Parliament, was dissolved by an edict of the Government after the discovery of the plot against Signor Mussolini, and there is little likelihood that it may be allowed to reconstitute itself on its former basis. The Social Democratic Party, which has many followers in central and southern Italy, and whose leader, Duke Colonna di Cesarò, once formed part of the Mussolini Cabinet, finds itself in a most awkward situation. Having announced their intention to resume their seats in the Chamber, the Social Democrat deputies informed the president of the lower house of their intended return, and in view of the threat of physical violence made previously by the Fascist depuconfidence that the Speaker would use his legal powers to guarantee to them the free exercise of their parliamentary mandate. To their surprise, the Speaker replied that he could not give them the desired guarantee, and they were thus forced to ascend the Aventine.

The most bitterly hit, however, is the Popular (Roman Catholic) Party. This party, which may be said to date officially from January, 1919, was so well organized and had so many supporters in the country that in the general election of November, 1919, it came next to the Socialist Party, both in the number of votes polled and in the number of deputies elected in the various constituencies. In the elections of April, 1924, the Popular Party proved the strongest of the Opposition groups, and returned thirty-nine deputies. The party is now disintegrating, and a certain number of deputies and senators have resigned membership in it, as they do not agree with its present decidedly hostile attitude to Fascismo and Signor Mussolini.

A considerable body had already left the party two years ago and formed a new group, called the National Center, which while not departing from the original program of the Popular Party issued in 1919, confirmed its attitude of loyal support to the Fascist Government, reserving its liberty to criticize and if possible amend any proposals which are not in line with the ideas on which its policy is founded. Those of its members who have openly dissociated themselves from the Popular Party have been allowed to take their seats in the Chamber, but the Fascisti remain firm in their determination that those who have been deliberately attempting to overthrow the Government by what they call "scandalously illegitimate means" should not be allowed to return to public life as if nothing had happened. + + +

The number of applicants for membership to the Fascist Party during the past three months has been so great that the Fascist Secretary-General, Roberto Farinacci, has decided to admit no new members for the next twelve months. The motto of Fascismo for 1926 will be "to put the house in order," and the renewal of the membership ticket will be preceded by full investigations into the moral life and political tendencies of the aspirants to the honor. The leaders of the party admit that in the past they have been too generous in admitting new members, some of whom joined Fascismo to obtain only personal advantages and would not hesitate to abandon it if a serious crisis were to develop. Quality and not quantity is what Fascismo needs, said recently Signor Farinacci, and this idea is to be strictly observed. The number of registered members today exceeds 1,000,000, which is the highest ever reached by a political party in Italy. 4 4 4

In the course of their peregrinations throughout the Italian peninsula, foreign artists sometimes make discoveries which escape the attention of Italians, although the latter are always on the lookout to exploit their artistic treasures. The latest find is that reported by an American artist, Miss Ackermann, in one of the leading art magazines, Dedalo. During a visit to the storage room of St. Mark's in Venice, Miss Ackermann observed some very old tapestries which aroused her curiosity, and which on further careful examination by art experts have been declared to be Flemish tapestries of the early fifteenth century. They are among the oldest in the world and second in beauty only to the famous tapestries of Angers, in France. They are twelve in number and represent the Passion. The find, which was made some months ago, was only known in the art world, and the Venice municipal authorities have already received an offer (which was refused) of $2,000,000 for the collection.

+ + + Biographers of Michelangelo relate that the great sculptor had one great ambition which he never realized, and that was to erect a gigantic statue of Moses on the highest peak of the Apuan Hills, dominating the sea. Michelangelo's wish is to be satisfied in part after more than four centuries, for a reproduction in its original size of Michelangelo's masterpiece, Moses (the original is in the Church of San Pietro in Vincoli, in Rome), will be shortly erected at Los Angeles, and will dominate the sea from the Californian coast. The marble reproduction of Michelangelo's Moses has been executed by Professor Andreini, as months, and the statue will shortly be shipped to America. 4 4 4

A great number of archæological finds have lately been made in several parts of Italy. An early Roman mosaic pavement, in white, gray and black circles, has been unearthed at Monfalcone, near the old Roman town of Aquileja, famous for its ancient remains. Except for a large damaged patch in its center, the pavement is in good state, and experts are now trying to discover to which house this old pavement once belonged. Another interesting find has been made in Rome in the baptistry of St. John Lateran, where an interior heating apparatus with terra-cotta air pipes and several fine mosaics have been found during some restoration works.

"Churchmen Ban War Sanction"

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: In your issue of Dec. 4, in an article published under the caption, "Churchmen Ban War Sanction," a report of the proceedings of the National Study Conference on the Churches and World Peace, reads in one paragraph:

The Rev. Anthony J. Barton; Southern Baptist, protested against indorsing the League as an action jeopardizing the possibilities of America's entrance into the

The next paragraph reads in part:

During the day the committee, consisting of Dr. William S. Mitchell of Richmond, Dr. Arthur J. Barton, Kansas City, Dr. Merrill J. Holmes, Chicago, and Arthur E. Hungerford, Baltimore, was appointed by the conference to visit the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arling-

The error which appears in connection with my name in the former paragraph was due doubtless to a mistake made by the clerk in transcribing my name from the registration card to the list of delegates as manifolded and given out. This is relatively unimportant.

But your reporter is in error in saying that I "protested" against the approval of the resolution in favor of America's entrance into the League of Nations. I did not "protest." I only suggested that, as a practical matter, the conference would probably accomplish more in favor of the World Court by limiting its declarations to that subject because it is commonly contended by those who are opposed to the World Court that those who favor the Court do so only as a step toward bringing the United States into the League.

In making my suggestion, I was careful to explain that I have always favored the League. I favor the Court and the League and I favor our adhering to the Court regardless of what may be done about the League. It seemed, therefore, that as a matter of practical wisdom, if the Study Conference desired to accomplish the most good in regard to the Court, it might have been better to leave out any reference to the League. Nor would this have been "voting down" the League. It would have been only a matter of the wisest and best approach to the accomplishment of an important task.

A. J. BARTON, General Superintendent, Missouri Baptist General Association, Kansas City. Mo.
